I. Course Description

Methods of interpreting Jesus' parables are surveyed and then an eclectic model drawing on the best insights of each is applied to each of the major narrative parables in the Gospels. Conclusions are drawn concerning the theology and significance of this portion of Jesus' teaching.

II. Course Objectives

It is the goal of this course that the student will be able to:

A. Explain the different schools of thought in the interpretation of the parables of Jesus, assess their strengths and weaknesses, and adopt an approach he or she can defend as the most hermeneutically viable.

B. Evaluate the authenticity of the parables and compare and contrast them with their Jewish backgrounds.

C. Itemize some of the most significant differences among paralleled accounts of the same parables in the various gospels, suggest plausible reasons for that variation, and determine the most likely theological distinctives of each of the three Synoptists in their presentations of the parables.

D. Summarize the main content and lessons of the major narrative parables.

E. Explore the more controversial points of interpretation surrounding the details of various individual passages and formulate tentative exegetical conclusions.

F. Apply the parables to contemporary Christian living and ministry in a faithful and effective fashion.

III. Course Materials

An NIV Bible and any synopsis or harmony of the four gospels (i.e., that lays out parallel texts in parallel columns for easy comparison). E.g., K. Aland, Synopsis of the Four Gospels (New York: UBS, 1982).

IV. Course Requirements

A. Reading of Major Text

Attached to this syllabus are eleven "quizzes" designed to test the reading of the major text by Blomberg. The reading assignments, correlated with the lectures by Dr. Blomberg, are given with each quiz.

B. Reading of Supporting Texts

Kistemaker and Wenham should be read in their entirety. Ideally, the student should read the treatments by these two authors of any given parable at the same time as they read Blomberg's treatment of it, at the appropriate point in the course accompanying lectures #9-20. A three to six page double-spaced typed paper conforming to seminary standards should be written for each book, comparing and contrasting each work with Blomberg's perspectives. Approximately one-third of each paper should point out similarities in methods and conclusions; approximately one-third should call attention to differences; and the final third should assess which of the two approaches, where they differ, is preferable and why.

C. Exegetical Assignment

Utilizing a selection of the books reflected in the bibliography below, or works of comparable detail and quality approved by the student's course tutor or advisor, the student must prepare a ten-page intensive study of one of the parables of Jesus analyzed in this series of lectures. Each item in the six objectives should be addressed, but more attention should center on items #4-#6. In other words, following whatever logical organization the student chooses, the paper should:

1. Display awareness of at least three different approaches to interpreting the particular parable and defend an approach the student deems best.

2. Note which parts of the passage have been questioned by scholars not inclined to assign the entire text to the historical Jesus and assess their objections.

3. Fit the parables into their historical context in Jesus' life and their literary context of the gospels (noting any way they differ from one gospel to the next, if the parable appears in more than one gospel).
4. Decide what he/she thinks the central truth or truths of the parable are.

5. Take a stand on any controversial points of interpretation within the passage.

6. Suggest relevant and legitimate applications of the parable to contemporary Christian living.

All conclusions not original to the student must be appropriately documented and defended by logical argumentation, not merely affirmed. The paper is to comply with the guidelines of the TIU Style and Format Guide which can be obtained from the DE resources area of TriNet or from the Trinity Library website. This assignment is best completed after all the lectures have been heard and all the required reading completed so that the various issues are better understood.

D. Final Exam

The final exam will cover the various interpretive approaches to the parables, the contribution of redaction criticism to parable interpretation, the kingdom of God and Christology in the parables, and the parables of the Matthew 13, the Prodigal Son, Good Samaritan, Wicked Tenants, and the Talents. The final is a 2 hour, closed book, short essay exam.

E. Online Discussion

The student is required to participate in the discussion areas of TriNet. Thoughtful responses should be given to at least one question in each discussion area, and responses to the comments of other students are encouraged.
